In response to workshop participants asking if they can help:

Yes, you can!!

Help support AVP/California!!

The Alternatives to Violence Project is an all-volunteer program. No one gets paid to facilitate or to participate. CDCR does not pay any of our expenses, so we are able to keep offering workshops inside the prisons despite state budget cuts. We rely entirely on voluntary contributions to keep going and to pay our bills.

Many people make this possible—

- from individual prisoners sending donations (any amount welcome!)
- from CDCR staff making monthly payroll deductions (through CSECC)
- from families of prisoners donating what they can
- from families of CDCR staff donating in recognition of the work we do inside
- from facilitators and their families giving of their time and energy
- from churches and community organizations budgeting annual donations
- from inmate activity groups donating some of the proceeds from food sales
- from local hotels donating rooms for use by our volunteers

You can help, too...

Sí se puede, tú también ...
